Biography

Kyle focuses his practice on helping corporate policyholders recover the full value of their insurance claims when those claims are reduced, delayed, or denied. Kyle brings a client-centric approach to high-stakes coverage matters, pairing detailed policy analysis with practical, business-minded strategy designed to maximize his client's return on investment.

Kyle's practice is informed by a strong foundation in economics and insurance law. He studied econometrics and game theory in college before law school. In law school, he served as Managing Editor of the Connecticut Insurance Law Journal and graduated with a Certificate in Insurance Law and Regulation. Before joining the firm, Kyle represented businesses and high-net-worth individuals in complex business disputes. He litigated cases against large, nationally recognized law firms—experience that sharpened his ability to manage sophisticated litigation and effectively advocate in high-stakes situations.

Experience

Kyle routinely guides national and international clients through complex, high-value first-party and third-party insurance coverage disputes. His experience includes matters involving significant property losses with associated time-element impacts and high-exposure, long-tail tort claims. Over his career, he has helped policyholders recover more than $70,000,000 from their insurance carriers.

Experience continued

Kyle's work for corporate policyholders and publicly traded companies is grounded in the reality that insurance is both a risk-management tool and a financial asset. He believes that the key to maximizing an insurance recovery often requires early intervention, disciplined documentation, and a well-developed coverage strategy.
