Biography

Kyle A. Rudolph is an attorney in SDV Fenchurch's California office who represents commercial policyholders in complex insurance coverage disputes and advises clients on risk transfer strategies designed to maximize available insurance assets.

Drawing on his extensive experience in insurance coverage matters, Kyle has helped secure hundreds of millions of dollars in insurance proceeds for policyholders across a broad range of first-party and third-party claims. Kyle was also a member of the SDV Fenchurch team that secured the landmark decision in Archer W. – De Moya Joint Venture v. Ace Am. Ins. Co., 713 F.Supp.3d 1260 (S.D. Fla. 2024), which clarified the meaning of “physical damage” and the function of the “LEG 3” faulty workmanship exclusion in builder’s risk policies.

Prior to joining SDV Fenchurch, Kyle served in the United States Navy, where he provided emergency medical support in high-pressure environments, including during a combat deployment in Afghanistan. His military service helped develop the discipline, problem-solving skills, and commitment to client service that continue to inform his practice today.

Outside of his practice, Kyle enjoys spending time with his wife and competing in endurance sports.

Experience

Kyle advises policyholders on complex coverage matters arising under a wide range of insurance products, including automobile liability, builder's risk, commercial general liability, commercial property, and professional liability policies. His practice spans the full spectrum of insurance recovery and risk transfer, from policy procurement and contract review to claim presentation, coverage analysis, and litigation.

As a litigator, Kyle develops cases with an eye toward trial from the outset, integrating his coverage knowledge into case strategy, discovery, motion practice, and dispute resolution efforts. While he enjoys the complexities and challenges presented by insurance law, his greatest professional satisfaction comes from helping policyholders secure the benefits of the coverage they purchased and achieving successful outcomes in high-stakes disputes.
